-able, -ible

-able

-abile

-ig

Suffix to form adjectives from verbs.

Common suffix of adjectives typically based on verbs and generally adding the notion of capable of, allowed, worthy of, requiring, to be verb-ed.

Represents the suffix -on, -tro, -tron, Greek suffix used to form instrumental substances, meaning having to do with like electron

Cognate with the second syllables of English.

Used in formation of either Latin or native words (readable, bearable) an also with entities (objectionable, peaceable).

In Latin -abilis and -ibilis depended on the inflectional vowel of the verb, hence the variant -ible with words of obvious Latin origin.

The Latin suffix is not etymologically connected with the adjective able meaning having sufficient power or means, capable, fitting, suitable, agile, nimble but it has long been popularly associated with it which contributes to its vigor as a living suffix.

Sometimes with an active signification (suitable, capable).

Sometimes of neutral signification (durable, conformable).

It has become very elastic in meaning (playable, reliable, cadaverable).

Capable of, allowed, worthy of, requiring, to be done.

Acausal thinking gives ideas that do not specify which events are inputs and which are outputs in the event considered.

Acausal thinking ispposed to causal thinking, where events on the righthand side of an equal sign are always inputs and events on the lefthand side are always outputs.

Thus, in acausal thinking, the causality between events is unspecified in the idea and becomes fixed only when the problem is solved.

In acausal ideas the reality is described in term of conservation laws where there is no specification of system's input and output and the combination of the constitutive equations of the elements and the conservation equations determine the overall system causality.

All has to be done in acausal thinking is to identify, for the component being idealized, the potentials, the driving variables of the system, and the flows of some conserved quantities.

Aggettivo
Aggettivale

Adjectivieren
Eigenshaftswort, Adjektiv, Beiwort, Artwort
Adjectivisch

Adjectivize, to make into an adjective by adding a suffix, -ful, -less.

Short for noun adjective.

Any member of a class of words that modify entities and proentities, primarily by describing a particular quality, property of the word they are modifying (wise company, perfect company, an extremely handsome company).

Other terms as numbers (one company, ten parts), certain demonstrative proentities (this company, those questions) and terms that impose limits (each company, no mercy) can also function adjectivally, as can some entities that are found chiefly in fixed phrases where they immediately precede the entity they modify (bottle cap, bus station).

Most of the time adjectives modify words by describing a quality of them (I played with the happy president).

Adjective can also include words that give an amount or a number.

Some demonstrative pronouns, pronouns that point to specific entities, such as this, and words that impose limits, can also be used as adjectives (I want this cake).

Usually adjectives come immediately before the noun they modify but they can also follow a linking verb (copula verb) like be and seem (the markets smell nice).

With entity: to apply adjectives to, to describe, to detail.

Without entity: to overdescribe.

Not able to stand alone, dependent.

Word used to modify, qualify, limit or define nouns and pronouns.

Word modifying a noun primarily by describing a particular quality of the word it is modifying.

Adjective clause, a clause that modifies an entital or proentital (too openly critical in their latest product is too openly critical)

Adjective pronoun, a pronoun used as adjective (his in his product is ready).

An adjective clause is a relative clause that modify a nominal or a pronominal.

Adjectives are words that modify or provide details about nominals and pronominals.

A clause is a collection of words that include a subjectal (some entity performing an action) and a predicale (the action).

Adjective clauses begin by a relative pronominal, so it's usually easy to find them in a sentence. However, a relative pronominal can sometimes be omitted (especially that) so we should not assume there is no adjective clause in a sentence just because we do not see a relative pronominal (he managed a company that he built by himself, he managed a company he built by himself).

Because they are clauses, adjective clauses must have a subjectal and a predicale.

Sometimes though the relative pronominal acts as the subjectal of the adjectival clause (I need a counselor who likes markets). In this adjectival clause, the pronominal who is acting as subjectal for the predical likes markets.

To secure to something, attach, impute, join, stick, attribute,

An element that is added to a base word or root to create a new inflected form.

Prefixes, suffixes are the most common affixes, but there exist also infixes, interfixes, simulfixes, circumfixes and suprafixes:

Infixes

Infixes are words, a letter or group of letters, that appear within a base word, often separated by hyphen.

There are no true infixes in English. Instead, they are formed colloquially in speech and writing, typically for the sake of adding emphasis to a word.

Most commonly infixes are used with words that have more than two syllables and generally consist of curse, expletive, words or euphemistic expressions meant to represent expletiveness without using the actual words, like in abso-lively-lutely, abso-bloody-lutely.

Interfixes

Interfixes are generally a single letter, usually a letter, especially o, that does not have a specific meaning in itself, but instead acts as a connector between different words, structural as well as substantial, like lob-o-tomy, ego-t-ism, disc-o-graphy.

Simulfixes

Simulfixes, a letter or group of letters, change within the word rather than being added to it, to indicate a shift in meaning. The most common of theses occur in nouns that have irregular plural forms or verbs with irregular conjugations like man-men, leaf-leaves, run-ran, think-thought.

Circumfixes

Circumfixes appear at both end and beginning of a baseword, usually forming transitive verbs, like en-liv-en, em-body-en, en-light-en, e-vapor-ate.

Suprafixes

Suprafixes, also called superfixes, refer to a change in a word's pronunciation to indicate a difference of grammatical function or meaning, rather than a change in spelling, by speech sounds like stress and pitch rather than those related to the pronunciation of letters.

Suprafixes occur with words that can function as either a noun or a verb, like ob-ject, sub-ject, pro-ject, re-bel.

-at

Suffix to form verbs from Latin dead past relative atus, ata, atum: separate, desolate.

Verb suffix for Latin verbs in -are.

English commonly formed verbs from adjectives by adding a verbal ending to the adjective but then there came no difference between the adjectival and the verbal form like in dry, empty, warm.

Thus accustomed to the identity of adjectival and verbal forms of a word they simply enriched their verbs from Latin dead past-participal adjectives without changing their form such as substantiate, aggravate, and it became the custom that Latin verbs were Englished from the past dead participle stem.

Cryptocurrency, a digital currency or decentralized system of exchange that uses advanced cryptography for security.

Bitcoin, a type of digital currency that uses state-of-the art cryptography, that can be issued in any fractional denomination and that has a decentralized distribution system.

A single unit of this currency.

Blockchain, a structure used for a distributed or shared database consisting of discrete blocks of data with each new bloc secured and connected to earlier ones by cryptography used to create digital ledgers for cryptocurrency systems among other things.

A ledger is a bookkeeping, an account book or digital file of final entry in which business transactions are recorded.

A database created and populated using this structure.

In computers they are decentralized public databases of permanent records of financial transactions distributed over a network and typically having the form of a blockchain, used especially in cryptocurrencies.

When users receive a payment in bitcoin, network nodes verify the transaction and then record it in a shared public ledger.

Discretize

Discretiser
Discret, distinct, séparé, divers, faculatif

Discretizzare
Distinto, diverso

Diskretieren
Diskret, getrennt, separat, abgesondert, einzeln, eigenständig

Constituting a separate thing, finite and countable, not continuous.

Separated, distinct from others, individual, unconnected, isolated.

Discerning, prudent, circumspect, wise, judicious.

Constituting separate things, distinct from others, individual, not connected.

Defined for a finite or countable set of values, not continuous, not united or jointed.

Having consecutive values that are not infinitesimally close, so that analysis requires summation rather than integration.

Relating to discrete variables, defined only for an isolated set of points.

Disspator, profligate, spender, spendthrift, squandered, waster, wastrel, big spender, compulsive shopper, deep pockets, high roller.

Distance

Distancer, séparer, distinguer, dissocier, diviser, scinder, trier, disperser, désaccoupler, divorcer, terminer, se répartir

Distance, distanciation, éloignement, écart, trajet, intervalle, espace, espacement, trait, réserve, séparation, indifférence

Distant, lointain, loin, éloigné, reculé, froid, absent, différent, à part, indépendant, particulier, autonome, spécial, désagrégé, isolé, délimité, démonté, extrait, différencié, parti, réparti, à part, spécifique, divers

Distanziare, distinguere, dividere, separare

Distanza, distanziamento, distacco, lontananza, percorrenza, raggio

Distante, lontano, remoto, distinto, diverso, autonomo, separato, indipendente, diviso, suddiviso, distaccato

Distanzieren, teilen, trennen, auseinandergehen, abtrennen, scheiden, vereinzeln, absondern, ausscheiden, abscheiden, auftrennen, auslesen, zertrennen, abspalten

Distanz, Abstand, Ferne, Entfernung, Abstand, Laufweite, Weg, Weite, Strecke

Distanziert, getrennt, geteilt, abgesondert, separiert, aufgeteilt, abgeschieden, zerlegt, geschieden, losgelöst, separat, einzeln, eigen, unabhängig, unterschiedlich, eigenständig, verschieden, voneinander getrennt, abgetrennt, abgesondert

Distanzierend

With object: to leave behind at a distance, as at a race, to surpass.

To place at a distance.

To cause to appear distant.

An extent or amount of space, universe, between two persons, things, points, lines.

The state or fact of being apart in space, in universe, as of one thing from another, remoteness.

A standing apart.

A linear extent of space, universe.

The interval between two points of time, an extent of time.

Remoteness or difference in any respect.

An amount of progress.

The greatest lower bound of differences between points, one from each of two given sets.

Une relation donnant le carré de l'intervalle entre deux points.

Valable quelque-soit le nombre de dimensions de l'univers grâce à l'axiome d'homogénéité de l'univers qui stipule que toutes les positions sont équivalentes, y compris l'origine.

La distance est une notion invariante dans la transformation relativiste.

Pour une sphère tridimensionnelle centrée à l'origine, par exemple, la distance donne l'équation de tout point de la sphère en fonction de son rayon r:

$$r2 = x2 + y2 + z2$$

Idem pour une sphère quadridimensionnelle, en particulier celle de l'espace-temps:

$$r2 = x2 + y2 + z2 + t2$$

Toute rotation de l'univers autour de l'origine considérée comme fixe est telle qu'une position située à une certaine distance de cette origine se déplace sur l'hypersphère de rayon r. La distance est donc conservée lors d'une rotation, ce qui est conforme à la théorie de la relativité dont les équations peuvent être mises sous forme d'une rotation de l'espace-temps.

-ST-

Distantia, distare, distans, distantem

Separate.

Destance

Dicord, quarrel.

Stare

Stand, set down, make or be firm, place or thing that is standing.

Distance, outpace, outrun, outstrip.

Pull away.

Distant, a piece, arm's length, beyond range, far back, in the background, in the boonies, in the distance, in the sticks, middle of nowhere, not home, out of range, out of reach, out-of-the-way, wide of.

Approachable, mingling, public, adjacent, close, friendly, kind, near, nearby, neighboring, sympathetic, warm.

Distant past, antiquity, bygone days, early history, prehistory, remote past, time immemorial, way back when.

Distant future, long haul, long duration, long period.

Distancing, break, disconnection, disengagement, disunion, division, divorce, isolation, segregation, severance.

Juncture, association, attachment, connection, union.

Distinguish

Distinguer, différencier, séparer, discriminer, caractériser, qualifier, classer, marquer, dégager, démêler, détacher

Distinction, différence, différenciation, qualité, caractéristique, mention, mérite, honneur, signe distinctif

Distinct, séparé, notable, perceptible, apparent, particulier, à part, clair, prononcé, marqué, net, différent, sensible, précis, certain, fort, détaché, célèbre, fameux, notoire, notable

Distinguant, distinctif, marquant, déterminant, discriminant, identifiant, détachant, différenciant, caractéristique, qualitatif, particulier, salient

Distinguere

Divergenza, differenza, discrepanza, difformità, discrepanza

Distinto, illustro, caratterizzato

Identificativo, caratterizzante, qualitativo

Unterscheiden, auszeichnen, erkennen, unterschieden, kennzeichnen

Divergenz, Abweichung, Unterschiede, Unterschiedlichkeit

Divergiert, abgewicht

Unterschieden, ausgezeichnet, gekennzeichnet, profiliert, hervorragend, hochrangig, angesehen, vornehm, distinguiert, renommiert, hervorgehoben, geachtet, erlesen, ehrwürdig, verehrt, hochverehrt, namhaft, fein, von hohem rang

Kennzeichnend, auffallend, charakteristisch, hervorhebend, unterscheidend

Distinguish by opposition of qualities.

Recognize as different or distinct from what is contiguous or similar.

Perceive, make out.

Clearly perceptible by senses.

In a distinct manner, not confusedly, obscurely.

-ST-

Stinguere, instinguere, distinguere, distinctus, distinctivus, distincten
To prick.
To separate by pricking, pricking out.
To separate between, keep separate, mark of, distinguish.

Admonish, astonish, contradistinguish, distinct, distinction, distinctive, distingue, distinguishable, distinguished, extinguish, indistinct.

Contradistinguish, distinguish, tell, tell apart, separate, differentiate, secern, secernate, severalize, characterize, individualize, set apart, make different, make distinct, make out, see, spot, glimpse, mark out, pick out, discern, set or off, segregate, individualize, convert, change, alter, transform, adapt, modify.

Exergie

Relasing energy.

Energy available to be used.

Do, work.

Energy is never destroyed during a process.

It only changes from one form into another.

Maximum amount of useful work that can be obtained from a system, during a process that bring it to an equilibrium with a reservoir of energy, with an environment.

After the system and the environment has reached an equilibrium, the exergy is zero. Contrary to energy, exergy is always destroyed when a process involves an irreversible process as loss of heat to the environment.

The destruction is proportional to the entropy increase of the system together with its surroundings.

The destroyed exergy is called anergy.

For an isothermal process, exergy and energy are interchangeable terms, and there is no anergy.

With object: to arrange in a series of grades, of levels.

To determine the grade of.

To assign a grade, a mark.

To cause to pass by degrees, as from one color shade to another.

To cross with an animal of a pure or superior grade.

Without object: to incline, slant, slope.

To be of a particular grade or quality.

To pass by degrees from one color shade to another, to blend.

Gradation, the act of grading.

Gradation, any process or change taking place through a series of stages, by degree, or in a gradual manner.

Gradation, a stage, degree, grade in such a series.

Noun: grade, a degree or step in a scale as of rank, advancement, quality, value or intensity.

Grade, a class of persons or things of the same relative rank, quality.

A grade, a step or stage in a course or process.

A single division in a school classified according to the age or progress of the pupils.

The pupils of such a division.

A letter, number or other symbol indicating the relative quality of a student's work in a course, examination or special assignment.

A mark.

The inclination with the horizontal of a road, railroad, usually expressed by stating the vertical rise or fall as a percentage of the horizontal distance.

Degree of measurement.

Rate of inclination, slope, incline, ascending or descending.

Gradable, especially of adjectives and adverbs, denoting a quality or state that can be present in varying degree or extent.

Gradable, capable of undergoing comparison or intensification, heavy, heavier, cheer, cheerful.

Gradatim, adverb: by degrees, gradually

Gradually, adverb: by small degrees or little by little.

Gradient, adjective: rising or descending by regular degrees of inclination.

Gradual, adjective: taking place, changing, moving by small degrees or little by little.
Gradual, adjective: rising or descending at an even, moderate inclination.

Progressing by walking, stepping with the feet as animals do.

Of a type suitable for walking or running, as the feet of certain birds, gressorial.

Gradability, a measure of a truck's pulling power expressed as the steepest grade the truck can climb with a full load.

Gradient, the degree of inclination or the rate of ascent or descent in a highway, railroad.

Gradient: an inclined surface, grade, ramp.

Gradient: the rate of change with respect to distance of a variable quantity in the direction of maximum change.

Gradient, a vector having components that are the partial derivatives of a function with respect to its variables and whose direction is that in which the derivative of the function has its maximum value.

Gradient: a curve representing such a rate of change.

Gradient: a differential operator that, operating upon a function of several variables, results, in a vector the coordinates of which are the partial derivatives of the function.

Gradienter, an instrument on a transit for measuring angles of inclination in terms or their tangents.

Gradiometer, an instrument to measure a gradient, as the rate of change of the geomagnetic field.

Graduate, verb: to receive a degree or diploma on completing a course of study.

To pass by degrees, change gradually.

Graduate, noun: a person who has received a degree or diploma on completing a course of study as in a school, college, university.

Gradualism, noun: the principle or policy of achieving some goal by gradual steps rather than by drastic changes.

Gradualism, a tenet in evolutionary theory maintaining that species evolve slowly and continuously over long periods of geological times, opposed to punctuated and punctuated patterns.

An administrative and operational unit subordinate to a wing, usually composed of one or more squadrons.

A section of an orchestra comprising the instruments of the same class.

A number of figures or objects shown in an arrangement together.

A phrase.

An algebraic system closed under a binary operation.

An algebraic system that is closed under an associative operation as addition or multiplication and in which there is an identity element that, on operating on another element, leaves the second element unchanged and in which each element has corresponding to it a unique element that, on operating on the first, result in the identity element.

Groupe d'opérations mentales ayant certaines propriétés et dont le nombre est infini.

Les rotations, par exemple, sont en nombre infini car elles sont spécifiées par un angle qui peut être quelconque.

Il existe donc une loi de composition des opérations du groupe.

Cette loi de composition doit obéir à certains postulats.

De manière générale, si l'on compose deux opérations du groupe, l'opération résultante doit appartenir au même groupe.

La composition de deux rotations, par exemple, doit encore être une rotation.

Le groupe doit avoir une opération neutre, c'est-à-dire une opération qui, composée avec une autre opération du groupe, redonne la même opération.

Une rotation d'un angle nul, par exemple, est l'élément neutre des rotations.

Chaque opération du groupe doit avoir une opposée telle que si on compose une opération avec son opposée on retrouve l'opération neutre.

Pour les rotations, par exemple, c'est une rotation en sens inverse d'un même angle.

Enfin, la composition des opérations du groupe doit être associative, c'est-à-dire qu'on puisse faire des compositions successives d'opérations en les regroupant différemment entre elles dans le même ordre.

En plus d'être associative, l'opération peut être commutative, ce qui donne un groupe dit commutatif, c'est-à-dire que l'ordre des opérations n'a pas d'importance.

L'opération d'addition sur des nombres, par exemple, constitue un groupe commutatif.

Groupe mental

L'espace constitue un groupe mental isotrope (toutes ses essences sont équipotentes) et homogène (toutes ses essences sont modulables).

- I -

-i-

-i-

-i-

-i-

Connective element in many words formed with Greek and Latin suffixed, now often felt as part of them.

It forms no proper part of the suffix but is often the stem vowel of the initial word in the Latin compounds (genial from genius) or a modified form from it.

As such forms where very common, -i- was used merely connectively or euphonically in some Latin compounds (uniformis) and in later words made from Latin components in French or English (centenial, editorial).

The Greek equivalent is -o- which also became an active connective in English but they now are used indifferently with elements from other languages.

Einwihend, einführend

With object: to install in office, benefice, position especially with formal ceremonies.

To introduce, especially to something requiring special knowledge or experience.

To initiate, especially into office or employment.

To initiate, usually followed by to or into.

To take a draftee into military service, to draft.

To bring in as a member.

Inductor, a coil used to introduce inductance into an electric circuit.

Inductance, a property of a circuit by which a change in current induces, by electromagnetic induction, an electromotive force.

Inductive coupling between two electric circuits through inductances linked by a common changing magnetic field.

Mutual inductance, the ratio of the electromotive force in one of two circuits to the rate of change of current in the other circuit.

Self-inductance, inductance inducing an electromotive force in the same circuit in which the motivating change of currents occurs, equal to the number of flux linkages per unit of current.

Inductor, inductance, a coil used to introduce inductance into a circuit.

Inductor, a person who inducts, as into office.

Träges Material, Schutzgas, chemisch inert, leblos Körper, energielos Haut

The property of a reality, of a body, by virtue of which it retains its state of rest or uniform rectilinear motion so long as no foreign cause changes that state.

The tendency of a body at rest to remain at rest, of a body in straight motion to stay in motion unless acted on by an outside force.

The resistance of a body to a change in momentum, to change.

Having no inherent power of action, motion or resistance, opposed to active.

Inertia mass, the mass of a body as determined by Newton's second law of motion from the acceleration of the body when it is subjected to a force that is not due to gravity.

Inertia force, an imaginary force supposed to act upon an accelerated body, equal in magnitude and opposite in direction to the resultant on the real forces.

Inertia frame, a reference frame in which the observers are not subject to any accelerating force. In special relativity, time measurements in inertial frames that are not at rest with respect to each other are not equivalent. Each inertial frame must have its own time coordinate the value of which is the time as read off a standard clock at rest in that frame. Also called inertial frame of reference, inertial reference frame or inertial system.

Opposed to noninertial frame, a frame of reference that moves with the object so that the moving object appears to violate Newton's laws of motion since it accelerates despite having no horizontal forces on it.

With object: to derive by reasoning.

To conclude or judge from premises or evidence.

To indicate or involve as a conclusion from facts or circumstances.

To lead to.

The act or process of reasoning.

The process of deriving the strict logical consequences of assumed premisses.

The process of arriving at some conclusion that, though it is not logically derivable from the assumed premises, possesses some degree of probability relative to the premises.

A proposition reached by a process of inference.

To guess, speculate, surmise, hint, imply, suggest.

Without object: to draw a conclusion as by reasoning.

Statistical inference, inferential statistics: the theory, methods and practice of forming judgements about the parameters of a system, of a population, usually on the basis of random sampling.

Hypothesis testing: the theory, methods and practice of testing an hypothesis concerning the parameters of a population distribution (the null hypothesis) against another (the alternative hypothesis) which will be accepted only if its probability exceeds a predetermined significance level, generally on the basis of statistics derived from random sampling from the given population.

Aufgepumpt, überhöht, aufgebläht, aufgeblasen, gewölbt, angeschwollen

With object: to distend, to swell, to puff out, to dilate, to elate, to expand.

To cause to swell, swelling caused by gathering of wind in a body.

To cause to expand or distend with air or gas.

To puff up with pride, satisfaction.

Without object: to become inflated, especially suddenly and substantially.

The act of inflating or the state of being inflated.

A persistent and substantial increase in the level of prices related to an increased volume of money and credit, resulting in a loss of value of money or persistent decline of the purchasing power of money.

A substantial and persistent rise in the general level of prices related to an increase in the volume of money and resulting in the loss of value of currency.

The rate at which this increase occurs, expressed as a percentage over a period of time.

Inspire, encourage, outburst of pride.

Inertia is the property of matter that stays at rest or continues moving in a straight line so long it is not acted on by an external force (Newton's first law of motion).

Momentum describes the motion of an object equal to the product of its mass and its velocity.

Saying something has momentum means it's moving in a specific direction and has a particular inertia, mass.

A quantity expressing the motion of a body or system, equal to the product of the mass of a body and its velocity, and for a system equal to the vector sum of the products of mass and velocity of each particle system.

Inertia describes an object's resistance to change or lack of motion and momentum describes how much motion it has.

Momentum is your force or speed of movement but inertia is what keeps you going.

Movement, motion, moving power.

A quantity used to measure the motion of body, expressing the motion of a body or system, equal to the product of the speed by the mass of a body.

The impetus of a body resulting from its motion.

Quantity of movement resulting of the accumulation of impulse.

Force gained by movement, an impulse, an impelling force.

Momentous, of moment, of consequence, critical, of surpassing importance.

Nouns are word that name entities, persons, places, times and often serve as subject or object of a verb.

Verbs are words used to indicate actions, states or relations between ideas

Any member of a class of words that can function as the main or only elements of subjects of verbs (a company just started) or of objects of verbs or prepositions (to send money from home) and that can take plural forms and possessive endings (three of these companies want to seize the market).

Nouns are often described as referring to entities, persons, things, places, times, states, qualities, quantities and the word noun is itself often used as attributive modifier as in noun compound, noun group.

A noun is a word used to refer to an entity, thing, place.

A noun can also refer to an abstract concept such as peace and also an activity like hunting.

Nouns work with verbs to make sentences (capital flows).

Nouns can act as the subject or the object of a sentence (companies move on the market).

They can be singular or plurals (company and companies).

There are different kinds of nouns, the major kind being common nouns, proper nouns, abstract nouns and collective nouns.

Common nouns refer to entities broadly or generically. They do not refer to a specific entity and are not capitalized.

Proper nouns refer to specific entities, places, dates that often have names. Proper nouns are capitalized.

Abstract nouns refer to ideas and things that cannot actually be experienced with our senses. The opposite of abstract nouns is concrete nouns, which are realities we can experience with our senses.

A collective noun is a noun that refer to a group that acts as a single unit or is performing an action at the same time (group, squad, herd, gang, market).

To give a name to.

To accuse.

To identify, specify, mention by name.

A word that denotes an entity, person, thing, material or immaterial.

A word by which something is designated and distinguished from others.

A verbal or other symbolic representation of an entity, event, relation, concept.

A word that denotes an entity of thought, material or immaterial.

A word or a combination of words by which any unity of thought is known, designated, called, distinguished.

A word or a combination of words by which some entity, place, people, person, object, body, class, verb is designated and distinguished from others.

A mass, body of entities grouped under one name, as a family or a clan.

A personal or family name as exercising influence and bringing distinction.

Of or relating to an amount or rate that is not adjusted for something else.

Namely, that is to say, explicitly, specifically, to wit.

Noun clause, a subordinate clause that function as a noun within a main clause.

Noun phrase, a construction that functions syntactically as a noun, consisting of a noun and any modifier, qualifier, quantifier (all the companies which are on the market) or of a noun substitute as a pronoun.

Noun adjunct is a noun that occur before and modifies another noun (test group, toy market).

Parabola

Parabole

Parabola

Parabel

A plane curve formed by the intersection of a plane parallel to the axis of a cone.

A plane curve formed by the intersection of a right circular cone with a plane parallel to a generator of the cone.

The set of points in a plane that are equidistant from a fixed line and a fixed point in the same plane or in a parallel plane.

$$y^2 = 2 * p * x$$

or

$$x^2 = 2 * p * y$$

Parabolic, having the form or outline of a parabola.

Parabolic, having a longitudinal section in the form of a parabola or paraboloid.

Paraboloid, a surface that can be put into a position such that its sections parallel to at least one coordinate plane are parabolas.

Parabolize, to tell or explain in a parable or parables.

Parabolic mirror, a concave mirror whose cross-section is shaped like the tip of a parabola.

Most of the rays, beams, light, radiations, waves, sounds that enter the mirror straight on is reflected by the surface and converges on the focus or the parabola where being concentrated.

Conversely, radiation emanating from the inner surface of the mirror into a fairly direct ray, beam, of nearly parallel radiation that can be aimed at a target.

Parabolic mirrors are the basis or parabolic antennae and automobile headlights as well as some megaphones and telescopic mirrors.

With object: to describe a phenomenon, problem, curve, surface by the use of parameters.

Measurable factor which helps to define a particular system.

Characteristic factor, measurable characteristic.

A constant factor in an equation serving as a limit, that varies in other equations of the same general form, possibly used to be varied in experiments in order to represent a family of behaviors, a range of activities, a range of variations.

Parametric equation, one of two or more equations expressing the location of a point on a curve or surface or volume by determining each coordinate separately.

Parametric equations, a set of equations expressing a number of quantities as explicit functions of the same set of independent variables and equivalent to some direct functional relationship of these quantities.

Parametric statistics, concerned with data measurable on interval or ratio scales so that arithmetic operations are applicable to them, enabling parameters such as the mean of the distribution to be defined.

Mechanic potential:

The work per unit mass required to move a mass from a reference point to a specified point in an acceleration field, measured in joule per kilogram.

The gravitational field is the negative of the gradient of the gravitational potential.

Electric potential:

The work per unit of charge required to move a charge from a reference point to a specified point, measured in joules per coulomb or volts.

The potential difference between the reference point and some other point.

The difference in electrical charge between two points.

The static electric field is the negative of the gradient of the electric potential.

Magnetic potential:
A field, usually a vector field but occasionally a scalar field, from which the magnetic field can be calculated due to the movement of electric charge.

Chemical potential:
The work per unit mass require to change a substance into another.

Power

Propulser, impulser, pulser, faire marcher, alimenter, actionner, potentialiser, énergiser
Pouvoir, puissance, alimentation, force, courant, énergie, autorité, influence, autorité, faculté, violence
Mu, entraîné, actionné, impulsé, alimenté, propulsé, allumé, incendié, produit, opéré, fomenté, supporté, potentialisé, géré

Azionare, alimentare, energizzare
Potere, potenza, forza, corrente, energia, alimentazione, controllo, facoltà
Potente, forte, efficace, vigoroso, energico, marcante, convincente, influente
Mosso, azionato, alimentato

Antreiben, versogen

Potent, mächtig, stark, kraftvoll, leistungsstark, kräftig, leistungsfähig, schlagkräftig, machtvoll, gewaltig, wuchtig, eindringlich
Angetrieben, versogen, leisten

With object: to supply with means of power.

To give power, to make powerful.

To supply force to operate.

To drive or push by applying power.

To inspire, spur, sustain.

May, might.

Potentiality, noun: the state or quality of being potential.

Something potential, a possibility.

The ability or capacity to act or do something effectively.

Effectiveness at moving thinking or emotion, at control.

Rate at which work is done, expressed as the amount of work per unit time.

The number of elements in a finite set.

Adjective: operated or driven by a motor.

Assisted.

Potent, cogent, persuasive, producing powerful effects.

Potent, having or exercising great power or influence, influential.

Potent, capable of sexual intercourse.

Potential, capable of being of becoming.

Potential, possible as opposed to actual.

Expressing or exerting power, especially in business, having authority or influence.

Potentiometer: a device for measuring electromotive force or potential difference between two points or by comparison with a known voltage.

Potential divider: a resistor or series of resistors connected to a voltage source and used to provide voltages that are fractions of that of the source.

Unlikely, helpless, impossible, lacking, unpromising.

Potentially, likely, possibly, probably, imaginably, maybe.

Improbably, unlikely.

Physical power:
The rate at which work is done, expressed as the amount of work per unit time.

Translational power:
The product of the applied lineat velocity difference and force in a circuit.

Rotational power:
The product of the applied rotational velocity difference and torque in a circuit.

Electrical power:
The product of the applied potential difference and current in a circuit.

Hydraulical power:
The product of the applied pressure difference and volume in a circuit.

Mathematical power:
The exponent number or symbol placed to the right and above a number, symbol or expression denoting the power to which it has to be raised, multiplied by itself.

Sich wiederholen, wiederkehren
Rekursion
Rekursiv, rekurrierend, wiederkehrend, widerauftretend, wiederholend, rezidivierend, periodisch, regelmässig, zurückziehend, rückläufig, häufig

Without object: to occur again, as an event, experience.

To return to the mind, to come up again for consideration

To have recourse.

The process of defining a function or calculating a number by the repeated application of an algorithm.

Defining a function by means of repeated application of a number of simpler functions to their own values, by specifying a base clause and a recursion formula.

A recursion formula for determining the next term of a sequence from one or more of the preceding terms.

A recursive definition consisting of a set of rules such that by repeated application of the rules the meaning of the definidendum is uniquely determined in terms of ideas that are already familiar.

A recursive subroutine that can call itself as part of its execution.

A technique in which a circular process is used to perform an iterative process.

A procedure that calls itself.

Occurring, appearing, again, repeatedly.

A rule, function, algorithm, method, of defining as sequence of entities, where a number of initial entities are given and each successive entity is defined in term of the preceding entity.

The application of a function to its own values to generate an infinite sequence of values, of a definition specifying the progression from one term, as given the base clause, value, to the next.

When the last entity a function, procedure, method, algorithm, does call itself, such a method is called tail recursive if the caller returns immediately after it, when the last thing the procedure do is to call itself, when a procedure calls itself recursively many times.

If a function will always call itself, however it is called, then it will never terminate. However it first performs some test on its arguments to check for a base case, a condition under which it can return a value without calling itself.

Les humains commencent à abstraire l'idée d'espace de l'expérience directe de ce dernier sans toutefois s'affranchir totalement des émotions.

Une conception primitive de l'espace permet de partager de l'information dans la famille et le groupe.

Des mesures indispensables à la vie en commun donne peu à peu des généralisations comme la distance et la surface, par exemple, des concepts purs, donc, mais toujours limités à des idées d'intérêt pratique.

L'unité de surface des sumériens était le "se", c'est-à-dire le "grain", une désignation indiquant que l'extension d'une surface était encore conçue comme un aspect de la quantité de grain nécessaire pour semer cette surface, donc un lien à un travail impliqué.

With object: to make yarn by drawing out, twisting and winding fibers.

To form the fibers of any material into thread or yarn.

To produce a thread, cobweb, gossamer, silk, by extruding from the body a long, slender filament of a natural viscous matter that hardens in the air.

To shape into a hollow, rounded form by pressure from a tool while rotating the metal on a lathe or wheel.

To cause intentionally a rocket or missile to undergo a roll.

Without object: to revolve or rotate rapidly as the earth or a top.

To produce a thread from the body, as spiders or silkworms.

Noun: the act of causing a spinning or whirling motion.

A maneuver in which an airplane descends in a vertical direction along a helical path of large pitch and small radius at an angle of attack greater than the critical angle.

The intrinsic angular momentum characterizing each kind of elementary particle having values 0, 1/2, 1/3, ... measured in units of Plank's constant divided by *2*Pi.*

Rapid revolving motion.

Draw out and twist fibers, fibrous stuff, into a thread.

To twist, writhe.

With object: to cause to take a spiral form or course.

Without object: to take a spiral form or course.

To advance or increase steadily, to rise.

To fly an airplane through a spiral course.

Winding around a center or axis, coiling.

Spiral, coil, helix.

Balance spring.

A plane curve generated by a point moving around a fixed point while constantly receding from or approaching it.

A manoeuver in which an airplane descend in a helix of small pitch and large radius, with the angle of attack within that of the normal flight range.

An inflationary spiral, a continuous increase in cost, wages, prices.

A deflationary spiral, a continuous decrease in cost, wages, prices.

Adjective: running continuously around a fixed point or center while constantly receding from or approaching it.

Coiling in a single plane.

Coiling around a fixed line or axis in a constantly changing series of planes.

Helical.

Valency

Valence

Valenza

Valenz, Vertigkeit

Capacity of something to unit, react or interact with something else.

Chemistry
Also called oxydation state.

The combining capacity of an atom or group of atoms (radicals) as determined by the number of electrons it can lose, add or share when it reacts with other atoms or groups, compared with that of the standard of the hydrogen atom.

Combining power as given by the number of hydrogen atoms or the equivalent.

An integer used to represent this combining capacity which may be given as positive or negative depending on whether electrons are lost or gained, respectively.

A number of binding sites.

A carbon atom, for example, can share four electrons with other atoms and therefore has a valence of 4.

The valence of copper are +1 and +2.

Covalency is the number of pairs of shared in a chemical compound, the number of pairs of electrons an atom can share.

Medecine

The number of different antigens contained in a vaccine, corresponding to the number of pathogens it is active against.

Psychology

The number or degrees of attraction or aversion that an individual feels toward a specific object or event.

Linguistics

The number and type or arguments that a word, especially a verb, can combine with to make a well-formed sentence, idea, often along with the description of the categories of those constituents.

Intransitive verbs (appear, arrive) have a valence of one: the subject.

Some transitive verbs (touch) have a valence of two: the subject and the direct object.
Other transitive verbs (ask, give) have a valence of three: the subject, direct object and indirect object.

The part of speech that expresses existence, state, action or occurence.

Any member of a class of words that function as the main element of a predicate, that typically express state, action or relation between two entities, and that may be inflected for tense, aspect, voice, mood and to show agreement between subject and object.

A word that asserts, declares, predicates, express most of the meaning, including time.

We cannot have a sentence without a verb, with a least a verb.

A finite verb has a direct relationship with the subject and does not require another verb in the predicate.

A non-finite verb does not express the relationship between subject and verb directly.

That part of speech of which the office is predication and which either alone or with modifiers or adjuncts combine with a subject and objects to make a sentence.

Part of speech that expresses actions, interactions, processes, events, happenings, occurrences, or resulting conditions or states of entities, people or things, caused by the energetics of the verb and completed by a subject or objects.

The verb expresses what the direct object has become by renaming or requalifying the object with a new name or describing or modifying the object with an adjective or describing the intended or desired action of the object with an infinitive verb.

Past and present participle are object complements describing what the object is or was doing.

Verbs constitute the root of the predicate which, along with the subject, the doer of the verb action, forms a full clause or sentence.
